

Fairness Across Places

Why does this matter? What's at stake?

The story you're telling:

"We need to make sure that no matter where children live, they have opportunities to access quality learning environments."

Strategic way to redirect thinking away from patterns such as:

Individualism, Separate Fates, Willpower, Zero-Sum Thinking

Concepts and ideas included in this frame element:

- Location shouldn't determine opportunity – we need to make sure that no matter where children live, they can access a great education
- Zip code shouldn't determine whether America's children can connect to high-quality learning opportunities – they should be available everywhere
- We should pay more attention to the full range of learning opportunities available in communities – schools, but also afterschool programming, libraries, museums, science centers, etc.
- Thinking about the need for ensuring greater fairness from place to place, we can see that we need to devote more resources to those areas that have low-quality learning opportunities
- Our goal should be to create a country where all children – regardless of where they live – have a fair chance to reach their potential and contribute to society